

Cavity Free at Three Technical Assistance Team

Patricia A. Braun, MD, MPH

Dr. Patty Braun, a Colorado native, is an Associate Professor of Pediatrics and Family Medicine at the University of Colorado Denver- School of Medicine. She obtained BAs in Biochemistry and in Molecular, Cellular and Developmental Biology at the University of Colorado in Boulder and went to medical school at the University of Colorado School of Medicine. After completing her pediatric residency at Yale University in New Haven, CT, she came to Denver Health where she has been a board certified pediatrician for 15 years and teacher of both medical students and residents. She recently completed a HRSA Faculty Development Fellowship during which she completed her Masters in Public Health. Her recent interests include improving the oral health of children. She is Colorado's American Academy of Pediatrics chapter oral health advocate. She currently is leading the state's evaluation of the Cavity Free at Three Oral Health Initiative; is an original member of the Cavity Free at Three Technical Assistance Team; and is the principal investigator of a Dental Hygienist Co-location project.