Elizabeth Shick, DDS, MPH

Dr. Shick is a board certified pediatric dentist originally from North Carolina where she attended undergraduate at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She completed her dental degree, pediatric dentistry residency and Masters of Public Health also from UNC-Chapel Hill. After graduating, she worked in private practice and public health as a clinical pediatric dentist for four years before coming to Colorado. In July 2009 she accepted a position at The Children's Hospital and the University of Colorado Denver as a faculty member specializing in infant oral health care. She is director of The Children's Hospital's infant oral health program, also called Cavity-Free at Three, and enjoys developing new programs to educate students, residents and health care professionals about infant oral health.
